Architecture Bulletin is the journal of record for the Institute in NSW. This means that it provides an ongoing snapshot of the architectural profession's interests and activities: from important professional and social questions, to matters of policy, completed projects and the lighter side of this community of professionals. Since the first edition was published in 1944, the Bulletin has been the place for our profession to have the conversation it needs to have.

In 2019, we celebrate 75 years of the Bulletin as we continue building on this history through a quarterly issue that is focused on key topics that relate to the work of the Institute in NSW and its 3000+ members.

If you want to know what the architectural profession is thinking about in NSW, Architecture Bulletin is the publication to read. With a dedicated readership, it also provides an ideal platform to advertise to a captive architectural audience in NSW.
