Ernest Edward Giles (1865-1936) was born on 30 June 1865 to parents Francis and Frances (nee Soole) Giles at Woodland Bank, the family residence in Moncur Street, Woollahra, Sydney NSW. By the late 1880s Giles had moved to St Kilda in Melbourne. In October 1889 he joined in partnership with Robert Alexander Kirkpatrick as Kirkpatrick & Giles, at the New Zealand Chambers 483 Collins Street, Melbourne. Their first joint project was development of the omnibus stables site at the corner of Brunswick and Johnston Streets in Fitzroy. In November 1889 the architects called tenders for a hospital at Warragul, east of Melbourne. With a financial crisis in Victoria in the early 1890s, business conditions deteriorated, and in 1893-1894 Giles is listed in sole practice at 483 Collins Street. By 1893 Giles' work was as minor as calling for the erection of a wall-fence to Eltham, corner of Stephen and Flinders Streets.

Giles fled the Victorian economic malaise and voyaged to Western Australia in 1896, joining an exodus of those seeking employment in the gold-boom State. In 1897 Ernest was listed in Wise's Postal Directory as an architect at William Street, Perth, and in this time appears to have secured some minor domestic projects. During the period 1898-1900 he is listed in partnership with civil engineer Walter Bernard Shaw (c.1866-1941) as Giles & Shaw architects, surveyors and engineers. Shaw was to be the founder and editor of the influential W.A. Mining, Building and Engineering Journal in 1903.

Ernest Giles was living at East Street in Guildford from around 1898, and he capitalized on the development of his local area, being particularly successful during the first decade of the twentieth century at Guildford and the adjoining Midland Junction (now Midland) area. Giles' designs are representative of Midland's second phase of development, following the relocation of the WA

Government Railway Workshops from Fremantle to Midland in 1904. Giles also produced some fine buildings at wheat-belt towns along the Great Southern Railway in the period 1903-1908. In 1901 Ernest Giles was in practice in his own name at St George's Terrace, Perth, and by 1904 was concentrating on his ongoing projects at Midland Junction and surroundings areas. His designs include the following: in 1901 a house at Woodbridge for Charles Harper, St Brigid's Church and school buildings at Midland for the Sisters of Mercy; in 1902 a residence at Guildford for Dr G.M.Y. Stewart, alterations to the Colonial Stores at Guildford for William Padbury, and the Woodbridge Hotel at East Street, Guildford; in 1903 a two-storey house in Meadow Street, Guildford - Albert Sanderson's 'Dunhelm', and the Bedford Hotel at Brookton for J.L. Cumming; in 1904 a residence on Thomas Street, between Rokeby and Onslow Roads, Subiaco for F. Cumming, residences at Midland Junction for S.A. Brown and G.E. Sewell.

In late 1904 Giles designed St Brigid's Convent for the Sisters of Mercy at Midland Junction, but it appears this work did not proceed and another local architect Thomas Hayden Cunningham (c.1873-1933) produced the 1906 convent building. In 1905 he designed a rectory at Midland Junction for the Church of England, an operating theatre and ward at West Midland for Nurse Stewart, three villas at Claisebrook Road in Perth for Mr Davis, and a grain shed at Guildford for William Padbury. In 1906 he organised the pulling down and rebuilding of the Avon Bridge Hotel at Northam for E.A. Lockyer, and the design of two hotels at Greenhills, for W. McMullen and R.J.G. Reid. Giles called tenders in 1908 for another large hotel, at York, for M. Ryan, and for Roads Board Offices and a rectory at Brookton.

It appears that in 1908 Giles was planning to move away from Perth, as in August he advertised the sale without reserve of his 'Office Furniture and Effects' in The West Australian, noting that he was 'leaving for York'. He soon called tenders for shops and offices in Avon Terrace at York for T. Davies. Perhaps his last work in WA was the design of the Quairading Hotel for J.J. Hagerty. A Perth newspaper of mid-1909 notes that Giles was practicing in Melbourne, but he had moved to Wagga Wagga, NSW by 1912, where he called tenders for rebuilding the Wagga Hotel.

Giles was responsible for the T.H. Mate & Co premises at Albury in 1916, and further research could determine further works in NSW during the final period of his career. Giles, noted as 'late of Lord Howe Island', died at Strathfield NSW on 18 March 1936, in his 71st year. He had married Mary Ross at Glendiver, Woodward Avenue, Strathfield in 1891. Mary died at Strathfield in 1949.
